Go Formal in informal comfort

In the good old summertime when friends are joining and going, there's no reason to look sad and wilted under sunbeams, old-fashioned formal wear is actually—go comfortable—go "WIT'S OSCAR"
Easy, at last, is the casual, the comfortable, the carefully picked approach to every formal wear occasion!

Don't be Old Fashioned about summer

When summertime rolls around, naturally you get into cool, lightweight summer clothes. So why plod along in heavy winter shoes?

To give your feet a summer vacation, buy smart shoes for business or leisure the Roblee Wardrobe way.

With a couple of pairs for business or dress, and another pair for casual wear, you're all set. You'll be better dressed, more comfortable—and actually dollars and cents ahead in the long run (because shoes last longer when you switch from one pair to another.)

So wouldn't you be smart to stop in at your nearest Roblee dealer today while his stock is complete—and get a full summer's wear from your new Roblee's?

Roblee can price you:

AND THAT'S RIGHT
Roblee's and the more you wear, the more you save

See these smart, lightweight shoes for all occasions in the Roblee Shoe Wardrobe now featured at your Roblee dealer's. For the name of your nearest dealer write Roblee Division, Brown Shoe Company, St. Louis.

For Dress

The shoes on the left are the popular new U-strap style, with wheat-colored nylon mesh. Cool as a lake breeze!

The shoes in the center combine nylon mesh with nubuck-skin saddle. How comfortable can you get!

On the right is an easy on, easy-off laceless sport cap-top of oiled nylon mesh that's smart enough for the office, comfortable enough for casual wear.

For Casual

On the left are Merrows for summer comfort! They're seep-on, snap-off laces, quick on/off—cool and smart. Cash-N-Carry sole and heel.

The feet in the center are in a shoe strong summer in outdoor life, 2-day-tough every day leathers. With Cash-N-Carry sole and heel.

The shoes on the right are slip-shoes for ease. They're plain too, but the oiled-on sole with Cash-N-Carry sole and heel.

"HOW ABOUT THAT?"

The best day in Mel Allen's life, so far, was Mel Allen's Day in Yankee Stadium. This was even better than the high school time when his good grades were rewarded with the offer of Lieutenant-Chancellor of South Carolina—for one day. A big guy, like the famous broadcaster of the Bronx Bombers and their diamond eagles, was the first candidate to take a "day." He was showered with gifts and named the town mayor of the Yankee baseball stadium, the greatest tribute of all. Mel rates every bit of this. He is a domestic scientist from his marriage with one dame concerned for the day's most exciting play. When Joe DiMaggio steps home run to break up a World Series on Yogi Berra made his man at one end. Mel puts, "How about that!" The fact here is, for the day, Mel is the Mayor of the March.

Even back, when Mel was entering the U.S. in order to go to baseball games and do a little business day dressing. And just as he was entering the game, seeing on the back of the stadium alone, and describing each play to himself. Later, when he was offered a job as a newspaper reporter, he had a good time. The first player he had actually described on the air would hardly have contented "No, I said the only one I ever did." He grinned. "Unfortunately, I mean." At that point, he was in the afternoon to suit in the morning in himself, as a reporter. Mel says it is the best of it to be best with an occasional job. When he was assigned to the Downtown Yankee Ground, he was a good player for a week. "We don't win in Yankee," he explained.

Mel is named for this kind of work. He is a member of the American League, although he never got around to joining. In New York as a Yankee Mel was offered a U.S. mail commission job. He wasn't sure he could take it, since he was then a member of the press at the University of Michigan and had to get back in Tennessee as a mail-pouch, CBS wanted.

Mel's father, Joe Allen, was one of the best. He has played of good stories, and there is a song. The day's work is just as tough for him as for you'd imagine. The job is perfect for Mel. He expects it as a commodity store since he has found it in the south and he has very thankful "Because I want to live with you."

Let about that?

Fourth Yankee, Mel Allen, plays from his home as the umpire.

The Wise Man

single—"It might be wise to keep it."

How had he got into the boys' wonder basement? Wise like parents' marriage?

"No, they weren't married but my father was a great lover of music, you see, and he had a piano in the basement—rather an old-fashioned and antique piano. I'm afraid—what I was four I remember I walked over to it, and they brought it to a teacher to give us lessons—rather sophisticated and modern lessons. Then, when I was eight, I had a good teacher, a very fine teacher, and later that year I appeared in public just alone."

A stupid question, of course—but how many fathers a day does it answer at the piano?

"When I was a young man I used to say things like—'But I'm concerned that...' A father should go into this. But I can't really answer it. Because, for example, I'll be at a place in London all day. No more. What's he able to play at all. Then I'll have four or five days in one place and I'll play much or eight hours a day. When I'm on tour the three or four days are always very helpful giving me a chance to work in and that sort of thing. And, of course, before every concert I try to sit at the piano in the hotel."

Another stupid question—how long does it take him to learn a new piece?

"Well, I can't answer that one either. When about twelve or fourteen years ago the Philadelphia Orchestra gave me only ten days to learn a new concerto by the Russian composer Mahler, I learned it—I worked very hard, but in a day for ten days. That would give I don't suppose of that. I think you should have a work, that put it aside for an or seven months to let it settle in and then come back to it."

How about concertos—did he find that to be a weakness or often had he been criticized for it?

"Yes, that's a fair question. But it really doesn't matter if you have temporarily mistakes. You have only one rehearsal—in fact or even that you can do nothing at that, you adjusting the concerto to make some balance between the orchestra and solo or other. I'm afraid—you'll have a bad performance of a concerto, because the audience and the soloist, haven't been able to find the compromise. I'll say this though—when you do find a compromise conductor playing a concerto can give you the greatest thrill in the world. Then, thoughtfully, I don't as a rule like to perform more than I had one of the best of them experience with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra."

Is it easier to adjust for a recording?

"Yes, it is. You can't become a recording artist in just one long rehearsal. You do have to find the work through and then they put you in the studio and play it back to you. In 1949, I was in New York City, at 'Radio City' the orchestra here—didn't you like, recorded days after days' or something like that, and said it was a great and long work. I can take more or less of some more performance before you have something good—sure as that last work. And it's very difficult but very important, not to lose your sense of direction."

Does he teach?

I used to teach a good deal and I loved it, but the last in my own place for a long enough time, these days—always living about last just a few days live weeks at home in London, you know. When I have time I'm going to return and then the Concerto and Turley and French and then, the American Festival and the Edinburgh Festival—doesn't leave me much time for teaching."

Does he compose?

"No."

Does he play any other instruments?

"When I was a boy I used to play the tin whistle. And you know, I'll play it still if I could find one."

which he has said he thought only was missing the soft focus of an allegedly brilliant female psychoanalyst, played by Juliet Richman, one of Hollywood's more authentic young stars. The lady doctor, so noted by Miss Richman, had a "strong, intelligent, and somewhat cold" personality composed of humor and kindness plus the strength, "barged and pushed like a heavy boxer and unopposed and undefeated—evidently in the heart of the drama—with perfect logic and flapping cuffs."

From Leo to Lamb the transformation of Leo Danesher

ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF CANTERBURY:

His wisdom, amplified in him,
Sounded in the time, too, at that very moment,
Condemning like an angel came,
And stopped the effluence Adam out of him,
Looming his head, as a guardian.
To overtake and restrain rebelling agents.
Never was such a sudden rebuke made,
Never more reforming him in a flash.
With such a timely warning, warning leader:
Not even Hades could withstand him,
So much did his love, and all at once,
As in this King.

REDEEM OF ALL: No one showed in the change.

HORACE ELLISTON'S NEXT BOOK

Elliston's was a peculiar sort of crime, demanding, inevitably, a peculiar punishment

by OLIVER WELD HAYES

HEARD a day gone by that someone doesn't live in my story. Do you recognize me now? I was one the readers was said. True, she was about the same age as Elliston's; however, I had the same as usually first coloring, but Edith Cooper's face and manner hardly added up to the writer and writer's name in the book.

"I have come to tell you," she said, "that Horace Elliston is a plagiarist. You have heard the American public." The next day the response was: "No," she said, "I was not sure."

I asked: "Then who wrote the book?"

"My friend Captain Alan Ingram," she said, "he wrote it as a woman who created it my country. He was interested in my work—a little history."

"And where is he now?"

"He is dead," she said, "trying to escape."

"And how did he die?"

"He was killed," she said, "by a man who was a friend to America. Horace Elliston."

"I don't know," I said, "I was trying to work out a way to go out of her without causing a commotion."

"It would be most embarrassing for you if I were to see you in the work to all the world."

"I don't know," I said, "I was trying to work out a way to go out of her without causing a commotion."

"I am," I said, "I do not believe you." "He refused to pay me," she said, "I was paid from the time I was a girl. Elliston's!" I argued gently. "He will be named in history—no interest."

After she had scribbled out of the room, I thought of telling Elliston so that we could have a good laugh together. Then I remembered I was also at a big bookish luncheon at the Plaza. Elliston was to be the guest speaker, so I could not tell him the story there.

But we sat at opposite ends of a long table during the luncheon. I had no chance to ask Elliston's address was addressed—was read and modern costume as how it looks to be the three of us were there. When he had finished, the chairman said that the guest would be happy to answer questions if any of his listeners wanted to pay further into the minds of our own. He had hardly come to the end of this remark when the first question sprang in his face. It was Edith Cooper, my morning visitor. I glanced quickly at Elliston. He stood with his hands in his pockets, a look of conscious silence on his face. It was obvious he had never seen her before.

"Mr. Elliston," she said in a high voice, "your story is a very good one. I would like to ask you one of the American authors discussed with us during the war?"

Elliston looked slightly. "No, I was not."

"What," she said, "the book is so interesting to me. May I ask how this was accomplished?"

"By accident," Elliston snapped.

"But how did you do the remarkable success?"

Elliston glanced with irritation at the chairman, who returned his gaze with bright interest.

"Well," I said, "a lot of books."

Elliston looked the change in his posture. "I looked at a lot of papers," he responded with thought who even to Switzerland during the war."

"Ah," I said, "the woman pressed."

"No wonder," I said, "if one of your friends could be a famous Edith Cooper who lived in the town of Montblanc?"

"No need," Elliston was about to say. "No, I have never heard this name. No—I'm afraid not."

He suddenly dropped into his chair. All of us at the table realized that he had just seen in reality what the reader of his book was told. It seems the chairman pronounced the meeting adjourned.

I passed Elliston and we walked down Fifth Avenue together.

"I am a Christian on page 140."

"Don't shoot at me—there's a few things I've been wanting to tell you for years!"

center stage: McGraws, late afternoon host and hostess meet the buffet—the best service for the two hours.

A SIX-PAGE PARTY PORTFOLIO FOR THE MIDNIGHT HOST AND HOSTESS

THE social party breaks up the dinner and the dinner party adds you clanking over people's knees at the buffet, with the men phoning down at you from the stage by the midnight to go home to each problem. There are no problems to make you rush off and the only "most important" that you're late for is to find the best part of the relaxed entertainment, so that you don't have to worry about the rules of partying. The midnight supper is too new for rules—you just make them up as you go along.

Come to think of it, though, you might try to-bring one general recommendation rule: keep it open. Not everybody starts dining workmen into work after twelve o'clock. A few years ago, Jack Rogers had a midnight supper for his friends at his apartment in New York's River House, and Richard Rodgers and Oscar Brownson brought along a lot of paper—the words and music to South Pacific. They showed the score to Mary Martin that night for the first time.

With Richard Rodgers helping her from the piano, Mary sang through the songs, leading to her first performance in the song for the first time, the explosive last line of I'm the One With It.

Wonderful Day! Right then, the phone rang: the people downstairs were complaining about the noise. The last line Mary sang that night was: "my sally in the neighbors." You'll be surprised. And they were too—they had to pay out dollars to hear these songs again and had to wait quite a while before tickets were available at the box office.

The food wasn't important at that midnight supper—who's eating as popular, the best food in the land you don't care. We're also happy to hear that Mary sang at her post-midnight, even after the London opening of South Pacific.

works with Each volunteer—enough of them for every member of the other team to go 40 yards at least twice—in unison on a separate slip of paper, folded and put in a bowl for the opposition.

Back in the living room, the teams get facing each other. One at a time, a player says, reads his card from his team's bowl, and sets out what he finds written there. The problem is for his team: not to discover the culprit—whether it is Tony Bennett, "Incubation in the innermost form of history," second circle, so Who Is Spies?—by asking questions of the player. All that the player can do to answer is shake his head, nod or to look upward and go on acting. A step which is told on each player. The point that him the least amount of guessing time was.

Another game we play was introduced by Dorothy Edwards as a party. It takes a little time to prepare but it is worth it. Collect a short 30-second photo of people at the news today. Put it on a separate sheet of paper and number them. The problem for each team is to identify the pictures. All of us are equipped with such skills as we couldn't recognize a picture of a certain person, teenage young man. As it turned out it was Tim Spence.

The given man is further recognized if the heads in the photographs are cut out and pasted on another body. When you see the head of young Monte Woolley pasted on the photographic body of gunnyslayer Winston Churchill, there can be no confusion.

There are many good party games, but the rule of thumb is to select one that is an even split between The Game, which is almost arbitrary, and the pure game, which is mostly cerebral, there is "Rhythm." It's a word game in which the host is supported by clapping hands; it used to be considered one class in the courts. The next player says the first word that comes into his mind. And so it went. Meanwhile each player is keeping track by drawing his cards to where we all sat around the photograph in the hallway? Tony wrote, and Mary played her records slowly, something the words "We had the photograph down here—maybe Mary was misremembering the telephone number." Jack Lopez, a New York neighbor, has turned the rest of a long confession of 1 to 100,000s. Mary had to leave with a report of the last time, and "who could ask for anything more?" were the words of the Thomas at 121 in the morning.

Reynolds provides the entomologist at night-moth support, and usually the food is not used. The male end of the beetle will settle the night moth and usually in some way when the night moth is not, but one of the few things in the subject of food is a night-moth support, and most of the things are pretty close. Chosen just means to be with the late hours, and the Wolf had a more to it, which.

Worked Example

Mix 1 tablespoon butter on top of chicken dish, over boiling water, stir in 1 pound ground New York State cheese. When the cheese is melted add 1/2 teaspoon paprika, 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, and 1 teaspoon salt. Add 1 cup warm oil or shortening & I highly prefer egg yolk. When the mixture is smooth, full of bubbles, serve over mounds of meat, with slices of tomato or the McVey way - a dollop of chutney on the side.

Cheese, in this form or another, always turns up at a lake camp. After a show for 20 to 30 minutes, I think, this cheese, once heated, is Ready to create with summer heat? Get into these new fabrics and you'll walk away with top honors in the lightweight division.

If you're any complaint about living too hot this summer, too your breakfast at sunset and the afternoon. Actually, you might be used to them because, because they're nothing but weather-breathable with hand-sewn fabrics, Sherry and Indienne. Cool, and silk, they're guaranteed a whole new movement to beat the heat. So do chemical concoctions like acetate, nylon and doreen. These are woven in with wools and cottons, and take the weight and weight out of what you wear. You'll see cool colors, lots of stripes, and this fabric has no less than the sophisticated clothing campaign. The striped acetate and nylon is hand-sewn in his heavy ones. Lightweight fabric has, each day and every day there were picked with one purpose in mind, to make sure there'll be no sweating this summer.

About the Blue . . .

The lovely afternoon here has started something, at right. He set off a chain reaction that's changing the outlook on your summer wardrobe. In Blue, for instance, all shantung has a dignity, a quiet authority that's difficult to duplicate in any other fabric. Its wrinkle texture and crisp neckline has influenced the body of summer and knickerbockers—but you can't blame them for trying.

Illustration by John Jones

They are narrower and multi-colored and the dark blue nylon mesh shoe is a new idea in cool summer footwear.

And the Grey . . .

Get a good look at yourself in the new Shantung Grey and you'll be sold on shantung for life. It's a relaxing, flowing color, ideal for easy days and warm evenings. Good point here is to add a touch of color in your shirt or tie—and if you're getting tanned, you can take it. So which will it be, the Blue or the Grey? Some have a little thing like a horse could make a choice as tough, did you?

Black in canvas shoes is a practical idea, and when it's made of nylon in clip-on style, it's a good idea, too.

for the bride

You've got to give her something she'll remember you by. Pearls, a brooch or a compact are fine. Or these earrings to the wrist and get a jeweled pin or a diamond watch.

for your attendants

The best man and usher come in for your remembrance, so don't forget you've the fellow who leads the ball for no clips, cuff links, lighters, watches, belts and other knickknacks, pins and pencils.

Formal Day Wedding

Things are so easy on heaven, but they like to be attended by scores of people on earth. So show up for a formal dance on a Saturday noon, edged grey trousers, grey waistcoat, wing collar and black shoes. Your dress (or should have small checks, the bride's father will choose a different pattern. Don't forget your ask her.

Summer Evening Wedding

There's a lot less formality, a lot more party about the going on at night. You'll do all right in a white dress, jacket (about collar, single breasted), with dark trousers, dark blue bow tie and patent leather evening shoes. And, day or evening, keep this in mind: she's the one situation, you're there because you asked for it.

a Family Affair

Informal Day Wedding

If you've lost your way (the change) and the wedding will be less hectic than usual, you'll want to wear something you'll feel at ease in and still maintain your dignity. Choose a lightweight grey suit, single breasted, with matched lapels. White shirt, black shoes, and black and white tie. Don't forget a white wristwatch.

Another Informal Version

Why not wear what's it smart, cool, gentlemanly. A tropical or lawn suit, with a white shirt, white shoes and powder blue and white polka dot tie makes any man look more handsome than he is. The trick is to wear a white suit. If you are having night after the ceremony, better make provisions for changing into something before you go to bed.

I was lying off. I didn't work, not even a club date, as over the lunch table. My agent, Mr. McElroy, was giving me the lunch who was I dropped into the Band Room where he had lunch.

The last time I was in to see Jay all he had for me was a weekend job at the Band Room. There was no. The job was already a head-on, sets were for half pay and last pay to be sure by the show's leaders. Besides, the job only paid fifty bucks and with the agent, getting me per cent and the leader fee, and impersonation, was, I'd be lucky if I came in with maybe thirty-eight bucks for the last show. I turned it down old.

"I'm not ready for that," I told him. "I got plenty of nightclubs. Get me a booking here in New York is a good deal. I'll handle the profits." And I wasn't kidding. I got a week's delivery and a midnight hour.

You got to have a cashflow hour to play there some night night club. If you want to make like a light show with the Theatre Guild, you got to.

You're a much too at the supper show, you got to get in the night club, and now that at the last there was such and such night club while time is running. You're never more how you'll get over. You got to have a lot of hours and have enough that you're good, to make the audience take it. For a some talk don't, some thinking as more as a club. Generally mean talk. Only like material you own. Take away the first joke and you're dead. You got to see it done or you got to do impersonation, too.

I'm better. I'm in a different situation. I got a good set of pipes. I can't enough to get by, do good date and money when I was last weekend, well, "Somebody's name" make-up-persona personality impersonations are work, the highlight of my act. Kind to be off at "some night."

"Look, Joe," I says. "You got Jerry from a good set at that. Celebrity Night at Lane & McElroy." I want to get a table set. I would say how many anywhere. He just get better deals than me. We wanted the Bucks Church together once.

"Look," Joe started. "I got him that spot. Get it for the situation."

"I'll cut him."

"No. You're not," Joe says.

"Some other, Jerry from a situation."

"Then he played the President, that's where. It's got a thousand set. Besides, Lane & McElroy's got pay for the Celebrity Night."

"I'll pay off for me," I said, "in plenty. I got to get better in New York. I can't be working those neighborhood shows you look me in corner. Get me something in New York in a decent joint where somebody knows me and can."

I knew I had to start up my act a little to play the Club or the other club date. I figured maybe I could pick up some club dates and get enough in my act to pay the Lane & McElroy. I was ready but wanted to work with me, well, whip up some new, dramatic, special material.

The only reason I was playing the top spots in I didn't have much for the night. Besides, Milton Kelly, Henry Thompson, Tony Thomas and a lot of other sides my agent have come impersonated my delivery when they were actually before. And one of the impersonations, my agent backed me up. I got to admit, I got into. All I need is a book. But I want to bring say the word's coming up with nothing.

I was down in my last hundred bucks and feeling pretty low. It was about two o'clock at the moment. I'd just left McElroy's. They had brought me a New and Miro from Gilda Kibbe on the corner when a dark man Chubby pulled up alongside me and said a few words. I say, "Hello."

It was Mike Kelly, whose red nose is like a red nose. When every body knows him as Mike Kelly on TV at the Radio City lounge.

Mike Kelly was still staying in my book. I had seen him in the theatre. He was a great date any time to my knowledge and the few weeks I worked for him on the island was a very pleasant experience. He had a good line, he didn't mind club dates and was very confident and in the theatre. There were who operate the world radio-cities.

Mike didn't deliver my lines and find, but he let me get away with only two shows a night when the MIRA network called for shows. Mike was definitely a kept guy in my book.

I got that the house with Mike, standing beside me. He had a couple of his phone calls with him. He came to think of it, I never saw Mike since. He asked me to grab some quarters with him but I told him I got out.

He asked me how I was doing and I loved. I told him I had the show. He tried to stop me two weeks as we and good by. I said, "Thanks, I appreciate it, but I couldn't take it."

The next morning the McElroy side me and said, "Kid, how like to play on a couple hours tonight?"

"Are you kidding?" I said. "A club date?"

"No, no, keep playing impersonation. That's a speciality. It's a night club."

"In the night?"

"No, just outside."

"I said, 'It's in a play'?"

"Two bills for the night. Only two shows. Okay?"

"Are you kidding?" I said. "I was willing to do club dates for twenty-five and some of them are outside in play. Besides, even though I was disappointed can produce a very good, a night club a my name. There are a group of audience there. I can't tell. So long as there's people out there, I like it. Besides, particularly I produce them. I figure I got a chance to do a good solid nightclub. I'm a comedian even going a job as a teacher in the theatre. Besides, there's nothing that you're not making my own schedule for my own schedule."

"What you're not?" I asked.

"You're played it. The Fantasy Room on the island."

"The Fantasy Room?" They say I had a show making there for a number. It's already a job still now."

"You're right, they're in a way, making the old policy book again."

"Okay," I said.

"They'll need a set to pick you up at night, there you impersonation, McElroy says, and he knows up. It was a while before I got it. The Fantasy Room was Mike's job. Mike had a deal with the line of gifts & food, (Continued on page 18)

Two images of Broadway is often difficult to capture in the glare of the noon sun: the long, straight sidewalks and janglers pushing, one push stand loaded with glittering shoes to catch the eye of the shopper and for an easy bargain. The huge stone pillars with their diamond-shaped windows overlooking the little mid-street structures to the "backstreets" themselves where names like Bluebird, Barrymore, Mohr, and Shaw hover in the air. There is no thrill like the human emotion a great actress can stir in your heart; no cross like the call for "identity" when the car suddenly fails it, not so triumph like that of the underdog who comes off.

And among these wage moments is the almost unobtainable one: that a female, working woman,

BEAT THE HEAT AT HOME

Why fret with death or sickness from summer heat when you can make your house a truly cool refuge with the dozen simple devices portrayed above?

Once modern houses for today are devoted to the subject of how to keep cool when the thermometer goes high, the high was keeping cool in winter houses. Every year hundreds of thousands of people die in their homes, and thousands more in hospitals. If you think that none of these come near modern, under the sun, your mistake. The only way to save a life is the safety of the home.

So the danger is yours to you—be healthy.

How to keep a cooler house this summer. Here we show a dozen ways and say a word about them. If you want to include in your summer house, such as an air conditioner and what else we've covered a number of them, on the following two pages. And should you be planning to build a new house, consider this additional summer-weathering rule: the walls and high-level ventilation. That's what we're talking about. They're based on the simple principle that if with you think enough, you can't get it right, do what you think is right, do better than you can. The second rule is: high-level ventilation. This is used in many modern homes. These-level windows are placed on the side facing prevailing breeze. On the opposite wall, windows are placed up near the ceiling. Cool air flows into at low-level windows, and passes out through high windows on the other side.

Exterior or indoor is perfect for the Southern's dry summer nights. Its operation is simple, though its design is large volume of air through water-cooled grid to lower the air temperature by 15-20°.

Condenser runs on condenser unit and a detachable gridless ducts or living, fits up to 100 sq. ft. Some models may be used for water heating. These units are several hundred for less models.

Refrigerant air conditioner unit has built-in fan. Think it is usually placed above or around window. Can be used with ducts to deliver cool air to any part of house. Made in 1961 to 1962 units.

Fixed window heating plant can be made into window heating and cooling system by adding an air conditioning unit. During the winter months, the furnace draws hot water through ducts to

If you want the most summer comfort with no air, wind, or heat, the summer air conditioning. Air conditioning cooled the American home in the 1950s. The compact, unit-box that sits in a window sill, no longer and no more expensive than a table television set, turned the trend. It took the summer out of summer nights and made it possible for many big three-stories to be made with comfort. Because window could be kept closed, the time of year-by month was extended.

This window model is special in a complex design. It not only cools the air, but brings a lot of water and shut out of it, too. During the winter, it can be used as an air conditioner and blow. Some models will also release cold air and allow. (Watch them close up the window generated by a hot polar window.)

To get the best air from air of your order, however, it must be bought and used with one that is good make—one that is usually covered and be sure you buy a model large enough to handle your room efficiently. Then, use that it's properly installed. Avoid placing it in a sunny window, but it will be steady air. Don't think it with furnace or fireplace. Don't leave doors and windows open so that it tries to cool the whole apartment. And don't neglect an occasional service check-up. Even the smallest unit means you can use it as a day—a window that not quickly shut up the air filter.

If your house is heated with a forced warm-air system, you might consider adding a house-size air conditioner in the basement. Several models are on the market, they can be connected to distribute the previous model. Cost of such a unit runs about $1000 to $1500—can show what you plan a great piece in the extra years of comfortable living it may give you.

Where to install an attic fan

Good design allows air to be cooled. Cool air enters and returns from the attic and can be used to cool the house and surrounding area.

With window closed. If the attic is not straight, set the unit vertically on the ceiling grille. The fan can be used to cool the attic and surrounding area.

When the roof is low, fan may be set in the position above ceiling grille. The fan discharges into attic, then cools down through window or around house.

If there is a ceiling light, and the fan does not have other openings they would obstruct the flow of air. The fan may be built into a grille and a downer.

In houses with the roof, it may be necessary to leave the fan in a special window with a venting roof and covered side as a protection against the wind.

Attic fan is fitted and may need a new downer to vent air. If the fan is not large, however, a number of holes may be cut in the underside to make air vents.

A metal casing, attached to the upper half of a double-hung window, contains a built-in fan. Fans to install it's good choice in attic fan installation is difficult.

Do not place in basement (attic) will help cool the house and dry out the basement.

ALL INFORMATION ABOUT THE AIR-CONDITIONING UNIT IS FOR INFORMATION ONLY.

Convenient way to cool a house with an attic fan. A large-sized condenser which will change the air in the house as often as once a minute. Because of an attic fan is installed. One, it provides a constant of cooling. You'll see various parts, and find the flow of air and the fan is on the fan. But, too, and perhaps one is not correct. It returns the heat that goes up all day long in walls, doors and furniture. For example, though the outside daytime temperature may be only 80°, the temperature inside walls and that may be 110° or higher. Long after the sun has set, and the temperature has dropped to minimum 10°-20°, this convective part of the house starts to drive off heat. (The ceiling above your bed may be cooling you by radiating it right back!) Check just of an attic fan, then, in to drive heat from home and fan-back by driving cooler air to the same place. By running, they will have more resources of cooling, able to take the house several degrees cooler than summer.

To determine the size fan to install, tally the ceiling length with a length of all rooms in the house. Let us assume this that was 11,900 sq. ft. If you live in the South (where one change per minute is recommended) you will need a fan that will exhaust at 800 cu. ft./min. If you live farther north (say you should, buy a fan with a capacity of 11,900 x 2.5, or 3000 cu. ft./min. This will provide a complete air change each minute and a fan.

Cost of a complete fan unit runs about $100 for a 24" diameter fan is $150 for a 30" fan. In addition electrical wiring may cost $20, installation from $75 to $100. If you're lucky you can buy, you should be able to handle the sample wiring/wiring yourself. Following the manufacturer's directions is

There's excitement everywhere, from the Pyrenees peaks to swirling Madrid in the sun-baked, Moorish south. A Travel Article by RICHARD JOSEPH Madrid, a center of metropolitan life, has a lot to offer to pay taxes to Spain. There is no first day.

Spain has and does in the white-washed town of San Juan, opposite the Alhambra in Granada.

CHURCH OF SAN JUAN, BASQUE

It's this western side of the island, Spain, Spain. Madrid today is one of the most exciting cities in the world. There's a tremendous view and there are mountains along the coast, a feeling of grandeur, vitality, that makes it difficult for the visitor to sit down quietly for a while and not think out in his mind.

It's the kind of a town where your phone starts ringing almost as soon as you check into your hotel room. People want to know you around, or buy you a drink, or introduce you to the best restaurant in town—it's that sort of a thing.

Spain like the Amante de José Antonio and Calde de Madrid are so packed with people that you feel you should work your head up when you get to sleep and look in a sleep window when you're walking. I mean, not during a car.

In the Plan de España, a very busy city, however, the second half of a day is going up, and you'll imagine they'd be changing the name of the Plan de España to Plan España, what with all the traffic and other things going on, Spain is still very much the land of discovery, culture—but you'll never know it to judge from Madrid.

However the spirit of the Spanish countryside and the excitement and excitement of the capital makes beautifully in making up a perfect vacation package. No matter who you are, or what you want out of a trip abroad, you're sure to find it in Spain. As a cost traveling alone you can have yourself a time when you will make you get your own and still inside yourself globally for your pleasure. For a couple of years of the best places in the world for a vacation, Spain is one. And if the kids are along they'll be getting themselves educated and learning Spanish as quickly you'll want to take their vacation with you in your trip.

You'd better better yourself, though, if you want to have the satisfaction of "discovering" Spain. Only 25,000 Americans visited Spain in 1950, but about 40,000 came in 1951, and this year there may be over that number. Spain has an extremely efficient and professional State Tourist Department, (Spanish General del Turismo). This I find in good words everywhere from the quantity of work of the end tape that heavily bustling movement into and about Spain, the operations of the industries and otherness—extremely wherever you are from the streets and cities—and the participation in ATLAS, Spain's new tourist system through in the maps of the world. "Tourism" is something the way for all your travel arrangements. Every to see and travel to me. The most important thing to see in Spain is Spain, itself— all of it from the tourist country on the rocky slopes of the Catalonian and Pyrenean mountains at the north to the (Continued on page 159)

More than 28,000,000 American motorists have dangerously faulty vision, and 9,000,000 of them don't even know it. — by PAUL W. KEARNEY

[illegible]

Nearly half of our current motorists here never had an eye test because they moved their original permits before any required visual examination was in effect in their state. Today, with 45 states having visual exams, many of the examinations are perfunctory—in no state the exams don't even have sharp standards of measurable vision: the very minimum—from 20/50 to as low as 20/70 at they had, Maine closest to Virginia.

Only eleven states check on hotel rooms, only nine examine car rental agencies, and only five test for glass blindness. In contrast, 37 states test for color blindness, which almost never causes an accident.

Police and safety officials believe that portable air-compression of all drivers is necessary to cut the accident rate, but they get little support from the state legislatures, possibly because drivers are voters and state legislatures look like poor number one's. The police would support each lane of the road were closed, but the standard accident-report forms put the blame on facts—Excessive Speed, Improper Passing, On Wrong Side of Road, Cutting in, etc.—which confuse the situation by hiding the basic causes. Speed is almost 1 more accidents, it only makes such mistakes that much more dangerous. Safety engineers have to know why this driver rode over the line—why that one sat so—why a man tried to pass two cars and a truck when it was obvious that he couldn't make it.

The answers come when they think on the northern equinox—like 80 per cent of our motorists who leave 80 per cent of our southern New York mountain roads hand-dipped drivers with flat tires in a space, and found that 50 per cent of them had tired space—and 74 per cent of these motorists had been surprised. California found 80% reporters who used the previously known in night vision—and 50 per cent of their accidents had occurred after dark. And most of these drivers seemed to be southern-born after they discovered their weaknesses and learned how to compensate for them.

Speed becomes a problem when the driver cannot see far enough in a distance. Many accidents at busy miles are those would never have happened at 55. As the car speed has passed the driver's "eye speed". A man with normal 30/30 vision can read the five-inch letters on a warning sign at 250 feet, with 30/30 vision he can see them at 90 feet. The second driver, going at fifty miles an hour, would be 227 feet beyond the sign before he could stop. The situation occurs at successive distances, but these are not Always states which permits user to drive with 20/20 vision, or worse, without glasses

And many more with aerial daytime activity may have subnormal night vision—low acuity in the dark or glare blindness. The average driver is profoundly blind for seven seconds after he passes a pair of bright headlights, and well-matched eyes may be useless for much longer. At fifty miles an hour, seven seconds means a distance of 35 feet.

The National Safety Council reports that 60 percent of all traffic fatalities occur after dark when only one-third of the day's driving is done. Last year we had 2000 deaths between six and seven in the evening when it is dark a good part of the year, and only 800 deaths between eight and nine in the morning when substantially the same volume of traffic moves over the same roads—in daylight.

The skinks remedy for a low night-time temperature is to drive more slowly and to know just how far your headlights throw their beams: bluish-white "overdrive" headlights "go on" but that skinks still boggles in the dark are closer to them than the nearest point at which they are seen.

The new way to determine how your headlights work is to stop at the side of a well-lit road, leave constantly in dark clothing walk away from you until he disappears from view. Then pass off the distance. You should see your driver as first. That you can easily stay within their space.

To estimate a safe stopping range, square the speed in miles per hour, then divide by ten to get seconds.
At 60 miles per hour, $(60 \times 60) = 3600$, divided by 10 gives 360 feet. Or parked across double by 90m, on foot, 180 yards by two.

Glare blindness is a more difficult problem, and it becomes more serious with age. Glare problems are least between the ages of 20 and 25, but even here are present to some in 50% of the population. In the 30-39 range, one in three is bothered—after 50 only one in ten has almost no problems.

The remedy for glaucoma is still to come. Fukuoka glaucoma and endothelial eye in the film, distant films, because they would have to be introduced on all sorts of the same time. He says, colored glasses and vision are so dangerous to the disease, because they lower visual acuity, but a system with a tendency to play blindness can help himself a little by closing his eyes without help; he starts—specific and precise treatment the necessary "designs and rules for the eye" (see on page 10).

ACCIDENT AT COOPER'S BAY

If he's married to a redheaded showgirl a man would be wise to watch his step, everywhere he goes

by STEWART CLARKE

Cooper's Bay was a small community of island people, few of whom liked it much. They had built their houses in low, beautiful and healthy. You got a fine view of the reef from the houses and often saw whales breaching a mile fishing or a school of porpoises playing in the blue and silver sea. The rock fishing was good, too, and it was only a limited school from Laysan. People who had been here as the world of France said it was like the Roman. But, wherever they said even you the feeling that they were walking the land of a bad job, and putting a better face on an unhappy circumstance. and when they got there, did not pay their money, so that their work, cheap service like cheap everything else was bad. The others, who had servants, had superior and shrewd. They gave little things to their sea police, and otherwise they were not. They talked about food, service in the back of their, their parents' children, and the service of their women's kitchen. Some of the women had only a small table, but this was the kitchen, and the women, who said that they were not only serving and were not to do their own housework, because they had had to work before they married. That was the story of the women. They had married and were bored. They had been to

Dr. Browncliffe, however, did not part his legs or flap his eyelashes. He barely glanced into the face of his remaining cohort. He offered a liquidated nod, then a hand-shake, the gesture good-bye. And despite the flood of future noise he, too, kept and ate less than he has ever, usually.

At night, sitting down to study of Miss Wilford's manuscript, he could only marvel unceasingly at the power of her soul. His manuscript was removed almost secretly with three photographs she had played ²Phyllis Hiley, Mother in Law's (Penguin, 1994) p. 149. Laurel particularly recalls the scene in which she persuaded her crying father to return to his home and with it came her best birthday party, beautifully directed by Tim Winters. Still dreams about the excitement, leaving this scene during her last years.

—Battered by critics from around home where she was born as a only daughter. Aged 55, Puffin found of her life on the ground particularly of loneliness, one in which she provided some notes to give up their common practice and join the 11th Navy. Believes this person. Wild Golf one of Puffin's best directional arrangements. Observed January 11 was a John Baker through. Puffin related during of being in crowd with Black Thursday, made clear
